

Your Voice, Your Choice Inquiry Cards: Teachers' guide

ELECTORAL COMMISSION
TE KAITIAKI TAKE KŌWHIRI

INTRODUCTION

This is a set of digital and printable cards that can be used in a range of ways with your students. The front of each inquiry card has an image that is related to one or more of the achievement objectives in the Your Voice, Your Choice teacher resources. These images are intended to draw on students' existing knowledge from inside and outside of school experiences. The questions on the backs of the cards act as recall and can provide further inquiry opportunities.

Although each card can be closely associated with one or more of the Your Voice, Your Choice teacher resources, they can be used with any of the four resources from levels 3–5 and Te Marautanga o Aotearoa. There are a combination of cards with relatively simple questions through to more challenging questions. This allows you to select the cards you feel are most appropriate for each of your students.

Possible uses of inquiry cards

1. As a starting point for a civics and citizenship learning experience

In groups, students can look at the image on the front of the card without looking at the questions on the back. Together they can share what they think the image might be about. When you introduce the activity you might like to relate it to what the terms 'civics' and 'citizenship' mean, including some of the concept vocabulary and ideas they may come across in their inquiry card images. For example, they may find Parliament, voting, protests, leadership, or fairness.

Once they have agreed on what they think their image is about, students can turn it over and read the questions. If they are unsure as to whether they are correct in their responses, they can ask you. There are short descriptions of each image in this teachers' guide and links to more detailed information around the topic.

Students then work together to answer each of the questions. Most cards have a combination of questions that require students to find more information, and questions they will be able to answer themselves.

2. During or at the end of a civics and citizenship learning experience

In this case, students can choose a card they want to inquire into based on the image on the front. You could let them look at both sides if you think they need more information to select an appropriate card.

Students could create a presentation to share what they have learned about the concepts on the card. You could let them choose how they present their information, making sure you give them criteria as to what the presentation should include and who the audience will be. For example, they could create a short video news report, a web page, a newspaper article, or a pamphlet.

3. As an extension activity

Students can also create their own sets of inquiry cards to be used by the class. The sets of cards could be based on the concepts the students have learned about during their civics and citizenship learning experience, or about related concepts that have not been addressed yet.

How to print the inquiry cards

Using the downloadable PDF available from the link below, you can print and cut up these inquiry cards for use in the classroom.
